

A Way of Life

Rearing strong, sound, and spirited dogs begins and ends with a way of life that centres around a human who has learned what it truly takes to bond.

A Way of Thinking

We see and experience the world the way a dog would.

When we do the work to understand them as dogs, they come to understand us as humans.

A Way of Feeling

We vibrate as a dog would, making our dogs feel seen and safe at our side.

We model the behaviour we want our dogs to follow, knowing they're always watching us.

A Way of Loving

We love our dogs for what they are, embracing their essential primal nature.

We understand fully that we are dealing with an instinctive being and that we are one as well.

A Way of Dealing

We set aside all ego hang-ups - guilt, doubt, impatience, and fear.

We take full responsibility for our dogs' behaviour so that we can deal effectively.

A Way of Relating

We work diligently to earn our dogs' love and respect.

We do not look to dogs to complete us, knowing that healthy bonds thrive on independence.

A Way of Rearing

We set up our dogs' life in line with our growing bond.

We look to dogs and their ancestors to understand how to rear our dogs.

www.wayoflifedogtraining.com